

THE BRASS FAMILY

The brass add power and energy to the orchestra. They have to sit in the back because they are so loud and boisterous. The player blows through a mouthpiece and the air travels down and around the brass tubing. The more tubing the instrument has the lower the sound. Members of this family include the trumpet, trombone, French horn, and tuba. Can you guess which instrument is lowest?

